"It is truly a matter of justice that our central conference ministers have support in retirement when their careers in ministry end."—BISHOP BEN CHAMNESS

In Memoriam

Bishop Ben Chamness

There have been countless individuals who have contributed to the success of the Central Conference Pensions (CCP) initiative. Perhaps no one contributed more to this effort than Bishop Ben Chamness, who passed away in December 2018.

Bishop Chamness took the lead in ramping up fundraising in 2007 to support CCP's efforts to establish clergy pensions in the central conferences. When CCP reached its $25 million goal in 2013, Chamness joined in the celebration.

"It is truly a matter of justice that our central conference ministers have support in retirement when their careers in ministry end," Chamness said. "This is a significant effort that now recognizes and rewards a life of service to the Lord."

Chamness served as president of the United Methodist Board of Pension and Health Benefits (Wespath) from 2004 to 2008. He joined the board in 2002 as an at-large member to its benefits committee.

Chamness excelled at leading groups in making major decisions, said Barbara Boigegrain, Wespath's General Secretary and Chief Executive.

"What he did was really help bring people together to have discussions to work through complex issues," Boigegrain said.

Retired Liberian Pastor Reflects on His Tenure with Church

The Reverend Ernest Namakpeh, to paraphrase Charles Dickens, has seen the best of times and the worst of times during his lifetime—especially during his tenure serving the many parishioners of the churches he has led.

Rev. Namakpeh was assigned to his first church in his homeland of Liberia in 1992. At that time, Liberia was well into the first of two devastating civil wars that eventually lasted for the better part of 13 years—in which nearly a half million people were killed.

He served five churches for a total of 21 years, before retiring to a church near the Guinea border. During his ministry—and to this day—he felt strongly that evangelism was one of the keys to life. He loves the teaching ministry of The United Methodist Church as a means of educating his fellow Liberians, especially children, who he sees as the future of his homeland.

“Young people need assistance to go to school,” Rev. Namakpeh said, “And I work within the church to help them.”

He is grateful that his pension allows him to care for himself and his family in his retirement. For that, he counts himself blessed and is truly thankful.

Congo Central Conference Annual Reviews Help Strengthen Pension Programs

CCP consultant Paul Dirdak visited and conducted pension plan reviews for all four episcopal areas of the Congo Central Conference—Central Congo, East Congo, South Congo and North Katanga—in the fourth quarter of 2018. These meetings were primarily reviews of plan performance—but also allowed time for visits with retirees to assure each was receiving their pension payments. A visit with the Congo Central Conference Board of Pensions also took place during this trip.

A meeting with the newly appointed Diocesan Benefits Officer Didier Banza also took place.

Funding sources, eligibility and benefits were among the topics on the agenda of the two-day seminar. There were many questions asked and answered as attendees helped each other understand the new concepts being presented. A retired pastor, who had been a teacher to many of the current District Superintendents, addressed the group and helped galvanize support for the program.

A primary activity of the visit to North Katanga was to present a pension seminar for all 38 District Superintendents and the Conference Treasurers of the North Katanga Episcopal Area. This was the first time that a CCP representative had presented a pension program in the episcopal area headquarters town of Kamina.

From 2000 to 2008, Chamness was bishop of the Central Texas Conference in his home South Central Jurisdiction. He led the conference as it took on hosting duties of the 2008 General Conference, when the denomination's multinational lawmaking assembly gathered in Fort Worth.

He came out of retirement in 2011 to serve for a year as interim bishop of the Tennessee and Memphis conferences in the Southeastern Jurisdiction.

Chamness is survived by his wife, Joye, sons David and Steve, their wives Caroline and Edy, and six grandchildren. He was 78.

Thanks to the generosity of donors worldwide, like you, Central Conference Pensions (CCP) achieved its $25 million challenge goal, providing necessary seed money to help launch pension programs for retired central conference ministers and their surviving spouses in retirement.
