

June 2019 Investment Report

Highlights

- The Federal Reserve voted to hold interest rates unchanged at its June meeting but noted increased uncertainty in the economic outlook. The June decision included a rare dissenting vote from a Fed governor who advocated cutting rates immediately.
- Trade and tariff rhetoric was a focus throughout June. Early in the month, President Trump threatened tariffs on Mexican goods over immigration and border security. At month end, the U.S. and China agreed to resume trade talks following the G-20 World Leaders' summit in Osaka, Japan. The U.S./China trade struggle appears to be affecting economic indicators across the globe, with U.S. manufacturing readings weakening to levels not seen since 2009.
- Mid-east tensions escalated following attacks on two oil tankers in the Gulf of Oman and the downing of a U.S. drone by an Iranian missile.
- In June, the International Equity Fund, Fixed Income Fund, Inflation Protection Fund, and Multiple Asset Fund outperformed their benchmarks, while the U.S. Equity Fund modestly underperformed its benchmark.

Monthly Overview

Central bank officials emphasize dovish signals

The June Federal Reserve minutes indicated increased economic uncertainty amid trade war concerns, raising the possibility of rate cuts for the first time in a decade. As a result, bonds and stocks rallied; the S&P 500 hit a new all-time high, and the 10-year Treasury note yield dropped below 2%. Similarly, European Central Bank (ECB) president Mario Draghi suggested the need for additional rate cuts and asset purchases if inflation does not reach target levels.

Slowing economic data

Tariff concerns dominated investor sentiment during the month following a number of announcements suggesting potential global economic weakness. The June IHS Markit US Manufacturing Purchasing Managers Index (PMI) came in at 50.6—just ahead of May's 50.5, which was the lowest reading since 2009. Toward month end, President Trump and President Xi Jinping met at the G-20 summit and agreed to resume discussions on trade, providing optimism to investors. Nonfarm payrolls rebounded to 224k exceeding expectations of 160k and showing broad-based strength—including manufacturing job growth despite trade uncertainty. Unemployment edged up to 3.7% as increased labor participation offset job growth. Wage growth, as measured by average hourly earnings was modestly up, but weaker than expected.

Geopolitical stress

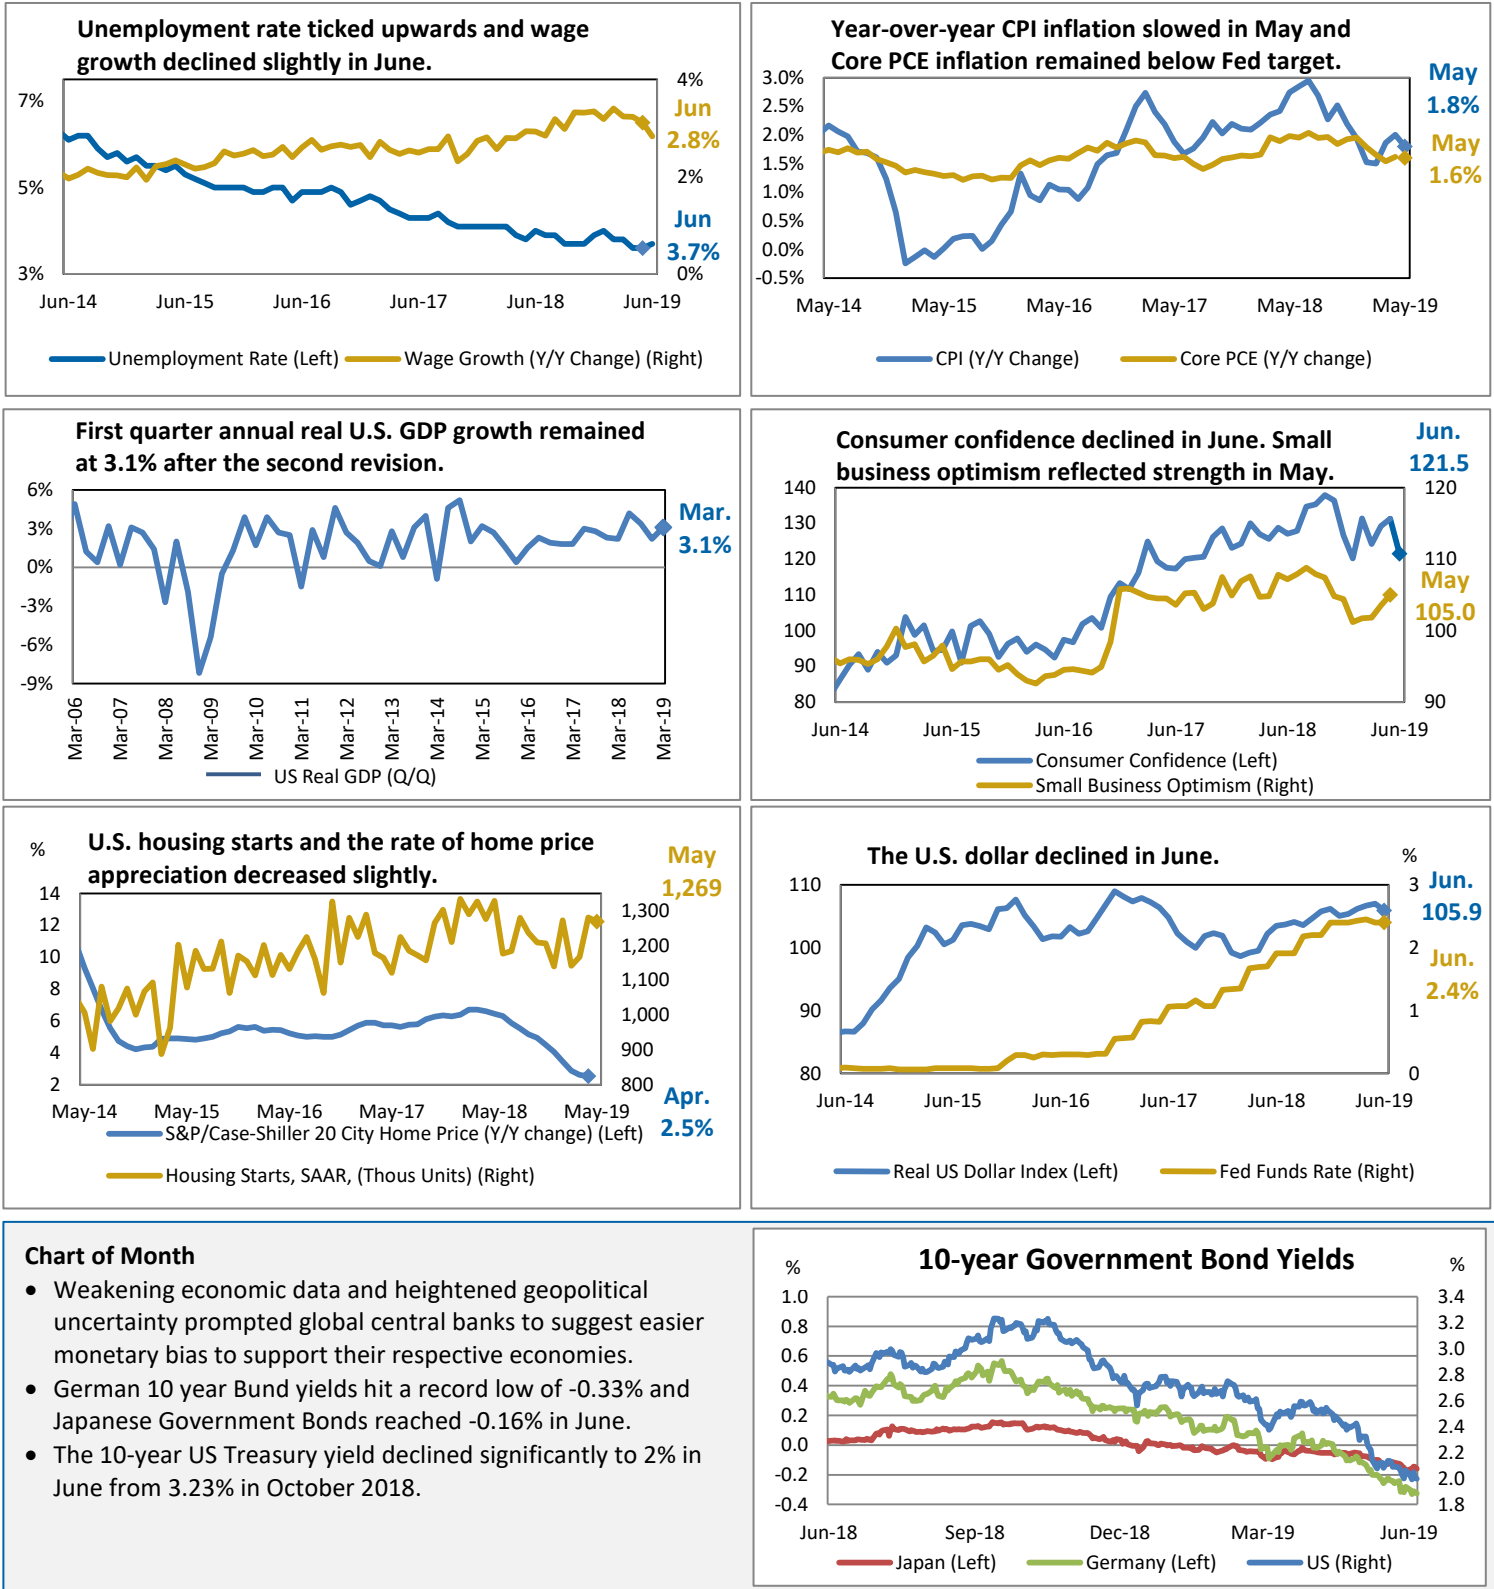

Tensions flared following the downing of a U.S. drone aircraft and attacks on two oil tankers in the Straits of Hormuz, a shipping chokepoint through which 40% of the world's seaborne oil passes. President Trump ordered sanctions against the assets of top Iranian political leaders but declined to launch a missile strike against the country's military assets. West Texas Intermediate crude oil prices increased 9% in June, which was the largest one-month gain since January.
